If You Were President
In this game by Scholastic for grades 4-12, students must select advisors to join their executive team, and balance the federal budget. Students must then answer questions from the press and justify their selections. The game ends with a newspaper article that incorporates students’ choices and answers which can be printed.

National Student/Parent Mock Election
On the website of the National Student/Parent Mock Election, students can join 5 million other students and participate in a mock election and view the results as percentages of the total votes, or by individual states. For students in grades 3-12.

Student Resources:

Kids.gov
This government website, by the Federal Citizen Information Center of the Office of Citizen Services, gives student access to the National Historical archives, and searchable primary source materials. Students can use photographs in the archives to create their own documentary. This website also serves as a portal to other government sponsored and educational children’s websites. Resources are for students in grades K-8.
